

New elearning partnership expands our portfolio with leading GDPR courses

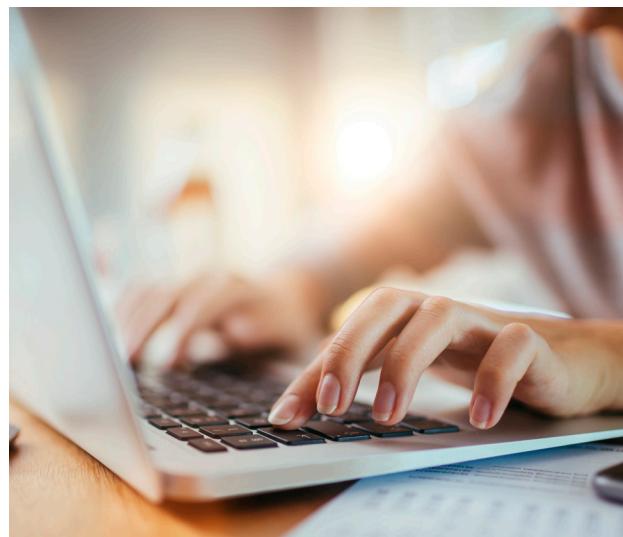

Skills for Health offer nationally recognised healthcare elearning, that can ensure your organisation maintains a safe, competent and legally compliant workforce.

Skills for Health have partnered with leading elearning provider Me Learning, to provide an extensive range of courses tailored for healthcare, including leading GDPR courses to improve compliance.

The new GDPR elearning courses can be delivered via your own or third party learning management system or by LearnSpace - a learning management and compliance solution based on Totara Learn.

Me Learning's GDPR elearning course has been developed with data security law firm Clayden Law, providing a comprehensive package of elearning courses to help organisations accurately understand and manage their GDPR processes.

With Me Learning's GDPR elearning, you can quickly train any number of staff at a very low cost per person with minimal disruption to the working day.

Join over 412,000 successful users across the UK who are enjoying the benefits of our healthcare elearning courses.

How can GDPR elearning help your organisation?

Stay Legal

Understand the risks, mitigate them and drive compliance, avoiding sanctions and reputational damage

Save time and money

Relevant, bite-sized learning instead of days of costly legal consultancy

Right training for the right people

Role-specific training that's relevant yet cuts costs and time spent on courses. All tracked for proof of your compliance efforts

Flexibility through LearnSpace

Learn anytime, anywhere, on any desktop, laptop or tablet with an Internet connection

Trust

Our courses have been developed in conjunction with, and endorsed by, Clayden Law, expert data privacy and cybersecurity lawyers
