Introduction

Context and Background

In the NHS Five Year Forward View for Mental Health<sup>1</sup>, Liaison and Diversion services are expected to be implemented across the country by 2020. As Liaison and Diversion moves from being a programme to becoming a service, delivery of Liaison and Diversion services, including for children and young people, will be an essential component in identifying individuals who would benefit from early access, referral into and treatment from services supporting a wide range of vulnerabilities. In addition, this is expected to result in an improvement in the continuity of care on release and the support for offenders once back in the community.

The Liaison and Diversion Operating Model<sup>2</sup> describes Liaison and Diversion as a ‘process whereby people of all ages with mental health problems, a learning disability, substance misuse problems and other vulnerabilities are identified and assessed as early as possible as they pass through the youth justice and criminal justice systems’.

Health Education England commissioned Skills for Health<sup>3</sup> to develop a career and competence framework for Liaison and Diversion with the aim of developing a flexible workforce able to respond to people with vulnerabilities who are either in or at risk of becoming involved with the Criminal Justice System. A career and competence framework for the Liaison and Diversion service can help support the development and growth of the workforce in this area, within mental health services and support the movement of staff between the wider Criminal Justice System and Liaison and Diversion services. The framework will enable staff to assess their own skills and competences as well as provide a career structure for staff working in this area. A useful resource for staff and their managers, commissioners and education and training providers, the framework helps to describe the Liaison and Diversion service offer and includes the skills and knowledge required by the workforce at various Career Framework levels, as well as the education and training required to progress within the service. A clear career and progression structure will help to recruit people into the Liaison and Diversion workforce and support the retention of staff.

This Framework document comprises the following elements:

- A career framework for Liaison and Diversion services constructed from 9 role profile templates. These are generic role profiles indicative of the types roles which may be found within a Liaison and Diversion service. They are not meant to be prescriptive but provide a useful starting point when looking to develop job descriptions. The career framework shows how it may be possible to enter and progress within a Liaison and Diversion service or indeed move into other areas
- A competence framework for Liaison and Diversion services. The competences used are National Occupational Standards. This framework aims to include the National Occupational Standards relating to the provision of Liaison and Diversion services, a sub-set of which will relate to particular job roles

Approach

Skills for Health's approach to our work with clients is predicated on active stakeholder engagement. Prior to the commencement of the development of the Liaison and Diversion career and competence framework, Skills for Health met with Health Education England representatives and members of the Liaison and Diversion team at NHS England to discuss and agree the approach to be taken.

It was agreed that the framework would be signed off by the Liaison and Diversion National Programme Board. Skills for Health attended a meeting of the Liaison and Diversion National Programme Board on 23 January 2018 to provide an overview of the project and will present the Framework to the Programme Board for sign off at its meeting on 30 May 2018.

The NHS England Liaison and Diversion team provided a list of stakeholders – the Liaison and Diversion Expert Panel – from whom there was excellent engagement and commitment. The Expert Panel comprised commissioners, service managers, practitioners, support workers and individuals with lived experience.

The development of the career and competence framework was informed by a series of three workshops, facilitated by Skills for Health, with the Liaison and Diversion Expert Panel. The workshops provided the opportunity for the members of the expert panel to describe the functions within a Liaison and Diversion service. These initially were broadly defined as screening, assessment, identification of need and referral into appropriate services, as described in the Liaison and Diversion Standard Service Specification<sup>4</sup> The functions identified were then mapped to the Skills for Health Functional Map reference functions and subsequently to National Occupational Standards. The panel agreed the roles to be developed and identified the skills, competences and indicative learning and development for each role.

The development of the Framework has been an iterative process, with comments received following the electronic circulation to the expert panel of the draft role profile templates developed within the workshops, informing the final draft framework document.

Methodology

The Career Framework for Health (Figure 1) and the Skills for Health Role Redesign methodology were used to identify the skills and competences required. The methodology for designing and developing roles, based on National Occupational Standards and the Career Framework for Health, brings together:

- Career Framework level descriptors which describe the role in terms of the level of responsibility, level of decision-making and critical analysis skills
- Main functions of the role mapped to National Occupational Standards
- Scoping statement for the role which describes its purpose
- Indicative learning and development for the role

Figure 1

Key Elements of the Career Framework

9

Career Framework Level 9

People working at level 9 require knowledge at the most advanced frontier of the field of work and at the interface between fields. They will have responsibility for the development and delivery of a service to a population, at the highest level of the organisation. Indicative or Reference title: Director

Career Framework Level 8

People at level 8 of the career framework require highly specialised knowledge, some of which is at the forefront of knowledge in a field of work, which they use as the basis for original thinking and/or research. They are leaders with considerable responsibility, and the ability to research and analyse complex processes. They have responsibility for service improvement or development. They may have considerable clinical and/or management responsibilities, be accountable for service delivery or have a leading education or commissioning role. Indicative or Reference title: Consultant

Career Framework Level 7

People at level 7 of the career framework have a critical awareness of knowledge issues in the field and at the interface between different fields. They are innovative, and have a responsibility for developing and changing practice and/or services in a complex and unpredictable environment. Indicative or Reference title: Advanced Practitioner

Career Framework Level 6

People at level 6 require a critical understanding of detailed theoretical and practical knowledge, are specialist and / or have management and leadership responsibilities. They demonstrate initiative and are creative in finding solutions to problems. They have some responsibility for team performance and service development and they consistently undertake self development. Indicative or Reference title: Specialist/Senior Practitioner

Career Framework Level 5

People at level 5 will have a comprehensive, specialised, factual and theoretical knowledge within a field of work and an awareness of the boundaries of that knowledge. They are able to use knowledge to solve problems creatively, make judgements which require analysis and interpretation, and actively contribute to service and self development. They may have responsibility for supervision of staff or training. Indicative or Reference title: Practitioner

Career Framework Level 4

People at level 4 require factual and theoretical knowledge in broad contexts within a field of work. Work is guided by standard operating procedures, protocols or systems of work, but the worker makes judgements, plans activities, contributes to service development and demonstrates self development. They may have responsibility for supervision of some staff. Indicative or Reference title: Assistant/Associate Practitioner

Career Framework Level 3

People at level 3 require knowledge of facts, principles, processes and general concepts in a field of work. They may carry out a wider range of duties than the person working at level 2, and will have more responsibility, with guidance and supervision available when needed. They will contribute to service development, and are responsible for self development. Indicative or Reference title: Senior Healthcare Assistants/Technicians

Career Framework Level 2

People at level 2 require basic factual knowledge of a field of work. They may carry out clinical, technical, scientific or administrative duties according to established protocols or procedures, or systems of work. Indicative or Reference title: Support Worker

Career Framework Level 1

People at level 1 are at entry level, and require basic general knowledge. They undertake a limited number of straightforward tasks under direct supervision. They could be any new starter to work in the Health sector, and progress rapidly to Level 2. Indicative or Reference title: Cadet

When developing the role profile templates for Liaison and Diversion services, four components were considered; the Career Framework level, National Occupational Standards, employability skills as described within the Skills for Health Employability Skills Matrix<sup>5</sup> (Appendix 1) and locality specific competences, for example, where practitioners may work in specialist areas such as Children and Young People or Intellectual Disabilities.

The Career Framework provides information about the level at which the job-holder is required to function. Each level has characteristics and attributes which describe, for example, the levels of autonomy, responsibility, decision-making and critical analysis skills needed in a role or job. It comprises nine levels ranging from Level 1 initial entry jobs to the most senior staff at Level 9.

It is applicable to health, social care and the justice sectors. Combining the characteristics of a particular level of the Career Framework with National Occupational Standards, provides information that can support the Liaison and Diversion workforce and service development as well as the identification of appropriate education and training.

Employability skills include the pre-requisites for someone undertaking a job and can be used to inform the person specification in a job description. It identifies the qualities, values, attributes and behaviours needed at each level of the Career Framework and which an individual must have, and express, to be a properly functioning employee.

National Occupational Standards describe the skills, knowledge and understanding needed to undertake a particular task or job to a nationally recognised level of competence. They focus on what the person needs to be able to do, as well as what they must know and understand to work effectively<sup>6</sup>.

Each National Occupational Standard describes the minimum standard to which an individual is expected to work in a given occupation and contains an agreed set of knowledge and understanding and performance criteria that must be met, in order for someone to be deemed competent.

Locality specific competences have been identified where appropriate, for example Specialist Practitioners at Level 6 of the Liaison and Diversion Career Framework.

Career and Competence Frameworks and Agenda for Change

Agenda for Change, the NHS pay system which incorporates job evaluation, the Knowledge and Skills Framework and terms and conditions, is specific to the NHS, and evaluated within services. The Career Framework however, can be utilised in a variety of settings and is not linked to pay. This makes it particularly useful in areas where staff are employed by different organisations.

The Career Framework provides a common language to support workforce planning and career development by identifying the characteristics and attributes of those working at different levels of the Career Framework and using National Occupational Standards to capture the knowledge and skills required for roles.

Whilst some of the Career Framework descriptors might use similar language to Agenda for Change, there is no automatic read across from Agenda for Change bands to levels within the Career Framework.

Liaison and Diversion Career Framework

The career framework for Liaison and Diversion services comprises roles from Level 2 to Level 8, as detailed in Table 1 below. Individuals will be able to progress into different roles within the Liaison and Diversion career framework either vertically or laterally. An individual may enter the service as a Volunteer at Level 2 or as a Peer Support Worker with lived experience at Level 3 and progress as a Level 4 Support Worker, after undertaking the required training and development. An example of lateral progression may include, for example, a community mental health nurse entering a Liaison and Diversion service as a Specialist Practitioner at Level 6 and equally, a Liaison and Diversion Practitioner could move out of the service into a community setting, for example, a Transition Care Programme (TCP).

The requirements of individual jobs in the workplace will vary, depending on the requirements of any particular Liaison and Diversion service in relation to local population, for example, veterans, non-settled community. The role profiles included within the Liaison and Diversion Career Framework are generic and so when used in practice, can be adapted to meet local service requirements.

Liaison and Diversion Service Competence Framework

The purpose of a competence framework is to identify all the activities that take place in a service or along a pathway or section of a pathway. It includes National Occupational Standards (competences) relevant to the activities undertaken by those working within the service. The competences include knowledge and understanding as well as performance criteria. Whilst they cover a function, they do not necessarily reflect the overall level of a role.

The competences within the framework can be used to contribute to the description of relevant jobs and roles, and to help commissioners and employers articulate the education and training required by individuals working in the service. The competence framework can also be used by managers and individuals within a service to help identify progression routes, identify the education and training required to enable an individual to undertake additional activities. In addition, it can be used by education and training providers to develop programmes of learning and qualifications.

National Occupational Standards are developed to describe the level of competence for a function, rather than for specific staff groups and so should be interpreted as applying within the context in which an individual works. Some competences may appear, from the title, to be applicable only in a health setting; the competence Communicate effectively in a healthcare environment GEN97, is an example of that but the knowledge and performance criteria within it are applicable in a wide range of settings, which includes criminal justice. The competences included in this framework are drawn from health, social care, the justice sector and other areas, including leadership and management, administration and learning and development. They have been used in the role profiles developed in the role profile templates which describe the jobs and roles within the Liaison and Diversion service, alongside their career framework level.

The competence framework for Liaison and Diversion is broadly based on a whole care pathway where the focus is on managing individuals within an approach where services work collaboratively to ensure that individuals receive coordinated multi-agency support to address their health and social care needs and their offending behaviour.

The competences do not replace protocols and guidelines used in the service, but work alongside them, describing the knowledge required and performance criteria that should be met by an individual working with those protocols and guidelines.

Core Competences

These competences are considered to be core for all those working within a healthcare setting and are applicable to the care and justice sectors. They are included in the role profile templates and the following table shows the competences to be found at each career framework level.

Liaison and Diversion Services Role Profile Templates

Nine role profile templates have been developed. They are not intended to be prescriptive but are examples of the types of roles that will be found within Liaison and Diversion services. There will of course be variations to role titles across services as well as variations within the roles themselves. However, as the Liaison and Diversion workforce expands, and services become embedded across the country, the role profile templates will provide a basis for the development of similar roles and appropriate underpinning education and training to support new roles as they develop.

The role templates have been designed to enable a common understanding and communication of roles which can be transferable across services. For example, whilst the Peer Support Worker role might not be found in all Liaison and Diversion services, the role profile template developed for this role can be used to help to support the establishment of similar roles where appropriate as well as defining the learning and development needs of such staff where those roles exist.

Each role template contains a learning and development section, which gives an indication of the education and learning relevant to the role. It is intended to be indicative of the learning and development requirement and is not a comprehensive listing of learning available.

Some people may wish to or need to study whole qualifications - others will not. Some will need to participate in smaller "bite sized" learning opportunities. Each individual should use the role template to identify with their line manager what their needs are and how they will achieve them.

Some services will have specific requirements in terms of learning and development, for example, Specialist Practitioners at Level 6 working in Crown Courts will need to have knowledge of the role and function of court appointed intermediaries.

The role profile templates, attached are as follows:

Appendix 2	Liaison and Diversion Service Volunteer
Appendix 3	Liaison and Diversion Service Peer Support Worker
Appendix 4	Liaison and Diversion Service Administrator
Appendix 5	Liaison and Diversion Service Support Worker
Appendix 6	Liaison and Diversion Service Senior Administrator
Appendix 7	Liaison and Diversion Service Practitioner
Appendix 8	Liaison and Diversion Service Specialist Practitioner
Appendix 9	Liaison and Diversion Service Operational Manager
Appendix 10	Liaison and Diversion Service Strategic Manager

Next Steps

As Liaison and Diversion is in the process of moving from being a programme to becoming an embedded service and 'business as usual', the first step that Skills for Health would suggest is taken, is that of launching the Career and Competence Framework, raising awareness of it across Liaison and Diversion services, particularly, with commissioners. The development of a communications plan and dissemination across internal and external networks would aid in 'spreading the word' about the Framework and encourage its implementation.

Evaluation of the framework is suggested following implementation and whilst it is acknowledged that it may be early days, it would perhaps be useful to begin to think about the baseline measures that would be used to evaluate the framework to identify suitable metrics which already exist and in addition decide what other data would need to be collected and collated.

It is suggested that consideration is also given to what would need to be put in place for the review of the framework following implementation. This may be challenging at this stage as it is recognised that the 'business as usual' arrangements for the delivery of Liaison and Diversion services may not as yet been agreed. It would, nonetheless, be beneficial, if possible, to bring together a group, similar to the Expert Panel, to review the framework a year or so after implementation to ensure that the framework remains current and reflects changing practice.

The Liaison and Diversion Operating Model and the Standard Service Specification make it clear that Liaison and Diversion services should seek to address vulnerabilities in the broadest sense. Developing and adopting a standardised - as far as possible – induction and other training, learning and development programmes across the service would help to ensure the consistency of this core message. Utilising local expertise to help deliver programmes, where appropriate, could be cost effective and provide CPD opportunities for the Liaison and Diversion staff involved in delivery.

Use of the Liaison and Diversion Career and Competence Framework to support career progression into and through the service has been mentioned previously. Organisations delivering Liaison and Diversion services which can access the Apprenticeship Levy could be encouraged to attract people into the service via an apprenticeship route, for example, in Business Administration. Apprenticeships could also be used to develop existing staff for example in Leadership and Management and, where staff have a clinical responsibility, in Advanced Clinical Practice. There may be opportunities too around the Widening Participation agenda for recruiting Volunteers at Level 2 and supporting their progression.

It is understood that work is currently underway to evaluate the role of the Peer Support Worker. Within the Liaison and Diversion Career Framework, this role has been described at Level 3 of the Career Framework. Whilst it is acknowledged that there is some support for this role being at Level 4, where the role includes supervision of volunteers, the role currently remains at Level 3, because the outcomes of the evaluation of the role in terms of value added to the service, have yet to be determined. This does not preclude the later development of this role at Level 4, should that be required by local services.
